paring an air rifle to an assault rifle.

Although marketed as incense, spice is smoked and ingested, sometimes with dire effects. In August, Governor Maggie Hassan declared a state of emergency after 41 people in Manchester suffered "serious medical reactions," half of them requiring treatment in hospitals, from using spice. Likewise, that same month three people in Concord using spice were hospitalized within 24 hours.

Only Councilor David Bownes (Ward 2), an attorney, dissented. He noted that the police conducted an investigation, but found no stores offering spice for sale in the city. He also questioned what he called "the factual basis" for supposing spice posed a threat to the city. "It's difficult to conclude that what we're in person or via an heirloom photograph", Mayor Ed Engler said he chose to recall his late father, then drew a snapshot of Donald George Engler in his Army uniform from his coat pocket. He noted that his father was a toddler when Armistice Day was first celebrated in 1919 to mark the first anniversary end of "the war to end all wars . . . until less than 25 years later, it wasn't."

Engler said that by 1942 his father was in uniform and arrived in France as the Battle of the Bulge was waning. He survived the fighting in France and Germany as the war drew to a close. "He was not a hero, in any specular sense of the word," Engler said. "He was just another kid from a small American town who answered the call to serve his country when it came. He did his job. Just like almost all of the 40 million men and women who have worn a United States of America uniform, dating back to 1775."

"The price of freedom," Engler said, "we know has been high. And it remains high. And I say, thank you

Also speaking at the earlier event held in front of the library were state Senator Jeanie Forrester, whose father served with an airborne unit during the Korean War, and Korean War veteran, Master Sgt. Elliott Finn.

Forrester urged those attending to remember when they left to "thinks of things you can do to make a difference in the lives of our veterans as a way to thank those who put their lives on the line."

Finn said that there was a reason that those who

NOTES: City Manager reported that the city issued 176 building permits between April 1 and October 31, compared to 162 during the same period a year ago, with an aggregate value of $21.5-million, compared to $13.8-million in 2013 and $8.8-million in 2012. . . . The City Council unanimously agreed to sell a patch of land 12 feet wide and 16 feet deep on Winnisquam Avenue alongside Martel's Bait & Sport Shop to Ralph and Jacqueline Langevin for $20,000. The city purchased the land in 1950 to provide access to two sanitary sewer siphons. The Langevins have granted the city an easement to access the sewer pipes that run under the Winnepesaukee River.

Valerie Johnston, president of the VFW Auxiliary, reminder her listeners that the average age of those in uniform is just 19 "half-man, half-boy." He is an average students, she went on, who played sports, listened to rock 'n roll, swing, jazz, hip-hop and 105 millimeter howitzers. He may forget to brush his teeth, she confessed, but never to clean his rifle. He can save your life or take it — "that's his job," she declared. And he has wept weep in public or in private, unashamed, she closed.

Earl Beale, commander of Wilkins-Smith American Legion Post 1, spoke of the sacrifices made by veterans and their families — frequent moves and separations, risks and anxieties. "Warriors need advocates," he said, in what he said "is not a political statement," explained why the American Legion and VFW fought to expose and overcome the shameful shortcomings of the Veterans Administration. "Veterans need each other," Beale declared, "and our country needs its veterans."
